Dr. M.G . ANANTHA PRASAD explained the process and importance of Process Design. How process Design is important for Prototype. Prototype is the 4th stage design thinking. What are the major steps to follow from process design to make a prototype. Prototypes are used in the final, testing phase in a Design Thinking process to determine how users behave with the prototype, to reveal new solutions to problems, or to find out whether or not the implemented solutions have been successful. The results generated from these tests are then used to redefine one or more of the problems established in the earlier phases of the project, and to build a more robust understanding of the problems users may face when interacting with the product in the intended environment.

The session ended with a Q&A session, giving the participants opportunity to clarify their doubts .

The session was concluded with vote of thanks by Dr Puneet Chandra Srivastava, Dean, EII-RKGIT, and Ghaziabad. The online event was attended by 150 above Faculty, staff and students from the college.

• Rough prototype of a new idea is often constructed as a "proof of concept". For example, a working concept of an electrical device may be constructed using a breadboard.
• A patent application often requires a demonstration of functionality prior to being filed.
• Some universities have proof of concept centers to "fill the 'funding gap'" for "seed-stage investing" and "accelerate the commercialization of university innovations".
